A sideshow 4 years ago, more blogs represented at political conventions

MCT
COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. In 2004, the Democratic National Convention offered press credentials to about 30 bloggers.

Back then, even though the blogosphere was already burgeoning, they were treated as a sideshow. News coverage looked at these online commentators like zoo animals—showing them furiously typing away in corners of the convention hall.

This time around, blogs have come of age and the Democrats are bending over backward to open the doors of Denver's Pepsi Center to bloggers for the Aug. 25-28 event. More than 120 blogs will be represented at the convention.

"It's a different environment," said Aaron Myers, the director of online communications at the convention. "Blogs are news sources for lots of people."

Of course, many of the 15,000-odd traditional journalists also will be blogging on the side. You'll find views and voices on the convention coming from every angle.

Most of the credentialed blogs are explicitly Democratic or "progressive," a few are nonpartisan or apolitical. Half of the list is made up of the "DemConvention State

WHAT'S ONLINE?

If CNN or The New York Times isn't providing the convention coverage you're looking for, don't worry—you've got plenty of other choices. You could try Beliefnet (beliefnet.com), a national, nonpartisan religion and spirituality Web site; or Disaboom (disaboom.com), a site focused on the interests and issues of disabled people; or Blue Mass Group (bluemassgroup.com); or Crooks and Liars (crooksandliars.com); or Square State (squarestate.net), a three-year-old progressive group blog that focuses on Colorado politics. Or a hundred other sites.

Blogger Corps"—that's one blog from every state, plus U.S. territories such as Guam and the Virgin Islands.

"We were really looking for blogs that know their state well," Myers said. "It helps us have a larger audience and a very specific audience in a lot of cases."

The blogging evolution isn't limited to Denver and the Democratic Convention. Republicans plan to credential more than 200 blogs for their Sept. 1-4 convention in Minneapolis-St. Paul.

"In 2004, we only had 12, so we're excited to welcome more than 200 this year," said Melissa Subbotin, deputy press secretary for the Republican Convention. "Our goal was to interface with as many Americans as possible."

GOOD NEWS, BAD NEWS

Ups and downs of air travel

GOOD NEWS

Air travelers suffering from summer sticker shock might find some relief this autumn. With demand for air travel falling faster than Olympic swimming records, some carriers are slashing autumn fares to levels not seen since oil prices began skyrocketing last year.

BAD NEWS

The average domestic fare for fall travel is up about 14 percent, or about $40 higher than last year, according to figures that Travelocity is scheduled to unveil this week. Domestic round-trip tickets are averaging about $342, while international fares are averaging $749.

TV on your cell phone? Not yet

Associated Press

NEW YORK Picture whipping out your cell phone and catching up with "Lost" or "Jeopardy," or watching the local 10 o'clock news, all for free.

You can do this with an imported Chinese phone, but you can't with any phone sold in the U.S.—at least not without monthly charges.

This is one of the reasons the U.S. is behind several other countries when it comes to making TV an attractive option for cell phones. Carrier business models are partly at fault, but choices about TV technology made long ago are largely to blame.

Most phones sold in Japan can tune in to free TV broadcasts, and there are tens of millions of viewers. Cell phones that can tune in to free broadcasts also are available in South Korea, Germany and China.

For starters, you can blame the impending shutdown of all full-power analog TV broadcasts on Feb. 17, a deadline

TRULY THE SMALL SCREEN

Only 3 percent of Americans regularly watched video on their cell phones late last year, according to a survey by the Pew Internet & American Life Project. That figure includes people who watched short, downloaded clips rather than broadcast TV.

set by the government. That Chinese handset, made by ZTE Corp., can only tune in to analog transmissions. Because most of them are going away, there's no real point in selling phones like that here.

China is keeping its analog broadcasts until 2015, six years longer than the U.S., so the phones are viable there. Ironically, the TV reception chip inside comes from a U.S. company.

The analog U.S. broadcasts are being replaced by digital broadcasts, but there are no phones anywhere that can tune in to those.

When the U.S. digital TV standard was laid down in the early '90s by the Advanced Television Systems Committee, it was optimized for high-definition signals to stationary antennas, according to Mark Richter, president of the industry group.

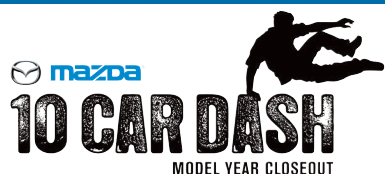

At the time, cell phones had screens that could display eight digits and nothing else, so little thought was given making the broadcasts work with mobile gadgets.

Readers chime in on hair, Olympics

Let it grow, let it grow, let it grow

Real men should be natural and let it grow ("Smooth operators," Aug. 15 cover story). I don't understand the fascination with hairless men—it has creepy connotations.

HARRY KESSLER, 48, SAUGANASH

Hair it is Currently I'm a 26-year-old male with a decent amount of chest hair. There is no way I'm getting rid of it.

A couple of times during college I shaved it, but I look better with chest hair. Open-collar shirts just look better with hair poking out. Machismo, baby! If you're going for the Ricky Martin look, yeah, go ahead and wax. But if you're going for the Burt Reynolds look, heck no—wear that chest hair proud.

GONZALO DEL RIO, 26, RIVER WEST

Hairy is hot

I cannot believe that such a ridiculous story as ["Smooth operators"] is on the front cover of RedEye.

Most of your readers who live outside the tony areas of Lincoln Park, Lakeview, Gold Coast (or even Andersonville now) will inform you that there is a huge resurgence in men retaining and maintaining their natural state of hairiness. Despite the opinions and practices of the prissies, sissies and metrosexuals ... being hairy is hot!

KEVIN HAHN, 35, SOUTH LOOP

Go natural

I'm hairy and don't think waxing is worth it. At least for me ... makes me break out for about 10 days afterward, and by that point the hair's already coming back. Regardless, I think it's OK for men to be hairy. Matter of fact I think men should be proud of their hair.

[I] think us men should take a stand and show off our hair. So here's to hairy.

JAY JORDAN, 31, WICKER PARK

Olympic plans

Mayor Daley wants the entire world to believe that Chicago is a first-class city. But he has forgotten one important element in his pitch to the International Olympic Committee in Chicago's bid for the 2016 Summer Olympics.

Chicago works because of the city employees who come to work every day to help make Chicago the great city that it is.

When are city employees going to be recognized for the hard work and dedication that they bring to Chicago?

The Chicago Star logo was designed to help promote the 2016 Summer Olympics in Chicago. The Chicago Star is supposed to represent a symbol of hope. But if we can't afford [to recognize] the people who keep this city operating, how can we ever hope to be a host city for the 2016 Summer Olympics?

Identity crisis

As society gets more high-tech, so do the thieves of personal information

By Alexia Elejalde-Ruiz
REDEYE

America is having an identity crisis. Literally.

More than 8 million people each year discover that someone is operating as their alter ego. Armed with their Social Security number, birth date, mother's maiden name and any other information they can get their hands on, these identity thieves open credit card accounts, apply for jobs and get car or student loans under their victims' names.

Though the prevalence has dropped since 2003, when almost 10 million people reported being victims, identity theft continues to run rampant. And as society gets more high-tech, so do the thieves.

Earlier this month, authorities charged 11 people in the theft and sale of more than 41 million credit and debit card numbers that the suspects allegedly obtained by hacking into the wireless computer networks of retailers including TJ Maxx, Marshalls, OfficeMax, Boston Market, Barnes & Noble, Sports Authority, Forever 21 and DSW. It's believed to be the largest federal hacking and identity theft case ever.

People age 18 to 29 are hit hardest by identity theft, representing 29 percent of all victims who file complaints with the Federal Trade Commission, the government agency that tracks identity theft. The prevalence in that age group may be because people discover the crime when they first start applying for credit, student loans and jobs, said Jay Foley of Identity Theft Resource Center.

Sharon Xiong, 23, said she has no idea how someone got ahold of her personal information. Xiong, who works in computer support at a bank in Elgin, where she lives, thought she was always careful about where she entered her information online.

But as she reviewed her bank statement online last summer, Xiong noticed a charge from match.com—jarring, as she'd never signed up for the dating site.

Soon after, Xiong got a bill telling her to pay to renew a domain name registered to her. What domain name? Xiong thought.

As the summer wore on, Xiong discovered someone had ordered a background check on her and charged it to her bank account using an electronic check. Then she got a bill in the mail for hundreds of dollars charged through billmelater.com, an online credit company, for merchandise from 1-800-flowers.com—a purchase she'd never made.

Unsettling, to say the least, but "I was actually more [upset] than scared," Xiong said.

Xiong filed a police report, closed her bank account, put a hold on her credit report and worked to get her money refunded. She cleared her credit, but not her peace of mind.

"I'm always worried that there's going to be something else," Xiong said.

Sharon Xiong of Elgin sits among piles of her bills. She is a victim of identity theft. STEPHANIE JANISCH/REDEYE

WHAT TO DO?

A basic step toward mitigating the damage of identity theft is to look at your credit report annually. Everyone is entitled to one free credit report per year from each of the three credit bureaus. Order them at annualcreditreport.com. The Illinois Attorney General's Office also offers an identity theft hotline to help victims of identity theft. Call 866-999-5630.

To help combat identity theft, credit card companies have installed more robust software to evaluate their customers' transactions so they can notify them if something looks unusual, Foley said. Some companies have lowered the fees of their identity theft protection services to encourage people to take part.

Still, even the most cautious consumers can be victims.

Sgt. Mark McFall, a 20-year veteran of the Bridgeview police department, said he is vigilant about shredding all credit card statements, and he avoids shopping online.

But in December, McFall got a letter in the mail from a rental company saying that he'd failed to return a truck. McFall, who hadn't rented a truck, discovered that someone had used a fake driver's license with his name and address on it. McFall ran his credit report and found store credit card accounts that he had never opened.

He had to drive hundreds of miles around Illinois and Indiana to file six separate police reports and clear his name at the stores with the unauthorized accounts.

While McFall may never find out who stole his identity—just one in 700 identity thieves is ever arrested, according to one study—he suspects the mess began when a mortgage company ran his credit report in November. He has sued the mortgage company for pulling his credit report without a permissible purpose, a violation of the Fair Credit Reporting Act.

"Once you have someone's credit report, you have the road map of their lives," said Keith Keogh, McFall's attorney in the case.

Most individual victims don't end up paying for the charges run up in their names—retailers and credit card companies are left holding the bag—but they do spend countless frustrating hours trying to clear their reputations.

Daniel Bulley, a 45-year-old Naperville man, said he spent a year and hundreds of dollars mailing letters with certified return receipts to clear the unauthorized accounts under his name.

Bulley, a senior vice president at a mechanical construction trade association in the Loop, discovered his identity was stolen in November 2003 when he got a call from Chase Bank informing him that someone was trying to take out a Home Depot card under his name in Florida. His credit report revealed two more credit cards and a landline phone service that weren't his. Seven months later, he found out someone had opened a cell phone account under his name and racked up a $3,000 bill.

Bulley said for a while he was giving credit monitoring services as birthday gifts so others wouldn't endure the same ordeal.

"You stay up at night thinking, I don't know if I'm ever going to get out of this," Bulley said.

AELEJALDERUIZ@TRIBUNE.COM

Thieves' tricks

While stolen wallets and Dumpster diving remain popular means of obtaining victims' information, the "most imminent threat" in identity theft is the growing number of companies that are transferring to wireless networks and are not encrypting the wireless transmission, making it easy for thieves to intercept information, said Jay Foley of Identity Theft Resource Center.

Others worry social networking sites are facilitating ID theft. Groups have formed on Facebook warning users not to put too much information on their profiles, such as exact birthdays and addresses, because thieves can use that information to pass themselves off as you.

Nishay Sanan, a Chicago defense attorney who represents people accused of identity theft, said a common method among his clients is to attach a "skimming" device to a credit card or ATM machine, collecting account data when a card is swiped. Perpetrators run the gamut, from restaurant employees to family members, but the motivation tends to be the same.

"Usually it's just greed," Sanan said. A.E.R.

Area hotels getting set for Games

Officials must prove they have enough rooms for '16 Olympics

Associated Press

With Chicago bidding to host the 2016 Summer Games, suburbs are vying for their piece of the would-be Olympic pie.

Hotels and resorts in the Chicago area are signing contracts, committing to reserving 85 percent of rooms to the Olympics if Chicago becomes host city.

Chicago Olympic committee members said they've reached two-thirds of their target for such room commitments, which is a competitive part of the bidding process. The committee wouldn't say how many rooms that is.

Officials must prove they have enough hotels for tens of thousands of visitors, athletes, media, security and Olympic staff—some of whom must stay for months before and after the event.

In recent weeks, Chicago 2016 staff toured the suburbs, where they met with convention and visitors bureau officials. Staff looked as far north as Gurnee, as far east as LaPorte County, Ind., as far south as Kankakee and as far west as St. Charles.

McCormick Place would be considered the epicenter of the Olympic activity.

Many hotels said signing the contract is a no-brainer because they get to book a large percentage of rooms for long stays.

Of course, it all rests on whether Chicago wins its bid. It's a finalist along with Tokyo, Madrid and Rio de Janeiro. The International Olympic Committee picks the host city next year.

Not all hotels were enthusiastic about committing at first.

The fear was that there was no guarantee the rooms they committed would be filled, and hotels could end up with empty rooms.

But Chicago 2016 officials assured the hotel owners they'd know a year before the games if their rooms are needed.

Some communities are thinking about adding hotel rooms, which could make them even more appealing to large Olympic delegations.

Hoffman Estates, for example, has plans for additional hotels to add to the 1,200 rooms currently open in eight hotels.

Trump topped off

Chicago's 2nd-tallest skyscraper gets its last dose of concrete

Chicago Tribune

Standing on the freshly hardened concrete of the 91st floor of the Trump International Hotel & Tower, Joe Payne watched planes in the Chicago Air & Water Show fly beneath him, and couldn't help but boast.

"Other people will pay good money for this view and I get it for free every day," said Payne, an assistant superintendent with McHugh Construction.

Behind Payne on Friday, several tradesmen completed construction of an elevator shaft, nicknamed "the penthouse," that will be the official top floor—the 92nd—of Chicago's second-tallest skyscraper. On Saturday, the roof of that structure was filled with the last of the nearly 180,000 cubic yards of concrete.

The "topping off" ceremony, much quieter than the star-studded gala planned with the Trump family at the end of September, will be repeated Tuesday for the supervisors and engineers who oversaw the three-year construction project.

Stepping around tools, steel beams and places where workers carved their names in the concrete, Payne said the project was far more complex and enormous than any of his men had ever worked on.

"We're all sad to see it end, but the guys are still happy. ... What a feat," Payne said.

Constructing Trump Tower out of concrete rather than steel allowed building designers to maximize window space, reduce material costs and keep the upper floors from swaying in the powerful

Chicago wind, said David Alexander, senior vice president for McHugh.

But moving and pouring 180,000 cubic yards of concrete—20,000 truckloads, enough to make 570 miles of sidewalk—was a technical challenge that might have been impossible only 10 years ago, Alexander said. Rather than lifting the material bucket by bucket, the construction team used a 680-horsepower pump to push a river of concrete up hundreds of feet to upper floors.

Though the concrete structure of the building was completed over the weekend, the tower's distinctive spire, which will raise it to its final height of 1,362 feet, will likely not be completed until later this year.

State Senate president to retire

Powerful Illinois Senate President Emil Jones Jr. is expected to announce Monday that he soon will retire, sources close to him said Sunday night, which will leave Gov. Blagojevich without one of his closest allies. His decision, not officially confirmed, likely opens a free-for-all to succeed him. Jones long championed more money for schools and education funding reform and made them his top priority as Senate president, a post he has held since 2003.

Teen charged in attack

Police have charged a teenage girl with throwing a caustic substance into the face of 48-year-old woman. Chicago police say they tracked the 16-year-old girl to California and she was extradited to Illinois on Saturday. The girl faces charges of armed robbery and heinous battery. On July 28, police say Esperanza Medina was leaving her house when she was splashed with the substance and severely burned. Officials say the mother of four had third-degree burns over half of her body.

Man falls 2 floors at concert

Even after more than 30 years, fans are still falling for Steely Dan. It happened Saturday night at the Chicago Theatre, when a man trying to slide down a stairwell railing fell two floors during a Steely Dan concert. He was hospitalized in stable condition. Police found the man on the basement floor. Police say he fell from the second floor and hit two other patrons before landing in the basement.

Questions in Savio death

When Kathleen Savio's lifeless body was discovered in the empty bathtub of her Bolingbrook home in 2004, state police immediately decided her death was not suspicious, a Will County deputy coroner's report obtained by the Tribune shows.

The investigators and experts re-examining her death as a possible murder are now asking how police could have been so quick to overlook signs something sinister may have happened to the third wife of Drew Peterson, then a sergeant for the Bolingbrook Police Department.

They are suspicious about the absence of blood residue or a sediment ring on the walls of the tub where she was found, sources said. If she had bled from a head wound while drowning in slowly draining water that night—as the theory went—why was the tub not stained?

No towels or clothes were in the bathroom where she was discovered, a paramedic noted. Books and papers were spread across her unmade bed and a picture was face-down on the floor near the nightstand, according to Illinois State Police reports also obtained by the Tribune.

But the case was reopened in November after Peterson's fourth wife, Stacy, then 23, disappeared Oct. 28. Authorities named Peterson the prime suspect, and in February, State's Atty. James Glasgow called the Savio inquiry a murder investigation after a second autopsy indicated her death was a homicide. Peterson, 54, has not been named a suspect in Savio's case.

Ouch! Fugitives fall for police sting

Dozens of fugitives from the law who showed up at a Southwest Side office expecting help getting tax rebate checks instead ended up in jail in recent weeks in a sting by Cook County Sheriff's police.

The undercover operation, "Operation Rebate and Switch" sent out 5,000 letters to people with outstanding warrants on charges ranging from burglary to driving under the influence to failure to pay child support, telling them they could be "one of thousands eligible for new or supplemental tax rebate" checks. More than 100 responded to the letters and sheriff's officers arrested 66, either at offices at 2906 S. Archer Ave. dubbed "Tax Recovery Experts, Inc.," or at their homes, after they "took us up on our offer for our assistance on their taxes," Sheriff Tom Dart said.

Sheriff's deputies often have difficulty tracking down fugitives who move from place to place to avoid arrest, and stings save the department time and money.

People traveled from as far away as Michigan to try to collect their checks, officials said. When one of the targets of the sting came in, an undercover officer would pick up a telephone and pretend to announce his arrival, then usher them into the back, where several officers arrested them. In all, 32 people were arrested at the office.

The owner of the building donated use of the first-floor office, and the entire operation cost about $8,000 for mailing the notices and setting up the office, only a fraction of how much it would normally cost to arrest 66 people, Dart said. Because many of those who drove to their appointments had revoked driving privileges, the sheriff's office towed their cars and took in about $6,000 in fines, paying for most of the operation, he said.

"Sometimes you feel like a traitor when people ask, 'Why don't you stay here and work for your country?'" said Oquendo, 35. "I want to help push Puerto Rico forward, but what about my kids?"

Sociologists say the wave of emigration could rival the 1950s exodus to New York, which helped reshape Manhattan's political and social fabric. This time, the Puerto Ricans leaving the island are highly educated professionals whose departure both provides a safety valve to growing unemployment and threatens the island's skilled work force.

A tale of 2 Olympics

Jamaicans makin' U.S. sprinters look bad

BEIJING A few fun-loving fresh faces have suddenly turned Jamaica into the "World's Fastest Nation."

And that supposed U.S. track and field juggernaut? Well, things aren't quite going to plan.

Little-known Shelly-Ann Fraser won the women's 100 meters Sunday night in 10.78 seconds to help make these Olympics a sweeping success for the Caribbean island.

Fraser was followed across the line, steps later, by teammates Sherone Simpson and Kerron Stewart, who both finished in 10.98 and both collected silvers—giving Jamaica the first sweep of medals in a women's 100 by any nation at any Olympics or world championships.

That impressive display came one day after Usain Bolt's easy-as-could-be, hot-dogging, record-breaking victory in the men's 100—giving Jamaica the first sweep of men's and women's 100 golds at any Olympics since 1988.

Not bad for a nation of 2.8 million, about the population of Chicago. Not bad for a nation that long has produced top sprinters but never an Olympic dash champion, man or woman, before this wonderful 2-for-2 weekend.

"I was speechless yesterday for a while. Today I cried," Jamaica's minister of sport, Olivia Grange, said. "Little Jamaica—our country is blessed with some of the best, if not the best, talent you can find."

Now compare and contrast. The single 100 bronze for the United States, earned by Walter Dix, amounts to the country's worst combined showing in the men's and women's dashes at an Olympics since earning zero medals in the 100 at both the 1980 Moscow Games—where, let's remember, a boycott prevented any Americans from competing—and the 1976 Montreal Games.

"We've dominated for years, and now it's their time," said Lauryn Williams, the 2004 Olympic silver medalist and 2005 world champion—and one of three U.S. women who never mounted a challenge during Sunday's final.

"We're getting a pretty good taste of what it's like to be at the bottom," Williams said. AP

Phelps ready to dive into new challenges

BEIJING After racing through nine days at warp speed, Michael Phelps wanted nothing more Sunday than to simply stop moving.

Even the most decorated swimmer in Olympic history needs a rest. Phelps certainly earned the vacation he plans to take, but he won't be away for long. The eight gold medals he won in Beijing represent only one step in his one-man crusade to win fans for his sport, and if all goes according to plan, he will be back at the 2012 Games in London with a new program of events.

Having conquered the 200-meter distance in the butterfly, freestyle and individual medley, Phelps, 23, wants to add sprints to the menu. Someone else will get a shot to win the 400 individual medley when he bids goodbye to his most difficult event. For now, Phelps is looking forward to doing absolutely nothing.

"Over the next four years, I'd like to try something new," said Phelps, who set Olympic records with his eight golds in a single Games and his 14 career golds. "I'm looking forward to going back to the States. I just want to lay in my own bed for five minutes, at least, and just relax.

"This has been one of the greatest weeks of my life, if not the greatest."

After setting seven world records at these Olympics, Phelps could laugh about the middle-school English teacher who once told him he would never be successful. The Beijing Games enhanced his already-high profile and certainly will make him even more money than the $5 million it is estimated he will pull in from endorsements.

His swimsuit manufacturer, Speedo, had offered him a $1 million bonus for breaking Mark Spitz's record of seven gold medals at one Olympics, set in 1972. President Bush praised him. "If you can handle eight gold medals, you can handle anything," Bush told Phelps in a telephone call to Beijing from his Texas ranch.

Swimming was among the Olympic glamor sports before Phelps' time, in part because of Mark Spitz's legacy. In the U.S., it quickly fell back into the shadows of football, baseball and other popular spectator sports when it wasn't surrounded by the Olympic rings. Phelps, though, seems to have made serious headway in his quest to boost its profile.

The drama surrounding his quest, and his regular-guy appeal, have resonated with Americans hungry for an Olympic star worthy of admiration.

"I don't want this to be a once-every-four-years sport," he said. "It's grown a lot over the past eight years. I want more people to get involved with the sport and be aware of what we're doing. I'm proud and honored to be part of helping the sport for the next generation of swimmers." AP, MCT

1 What's next for Michael Phelps?	He single-handedly hunts down and captures Osama bin Laden.	He promised a piggyback ride to Bob Costas.	Retire from swimming and return to Atlantis.	A nap.	Buy a shirt already.
2 Help solve the Bears' offensive problems.	Get. A. New. QB. Talk about Rexual dysfunction.	That O-line needs help. See if Beijing will loan the Great Wall of China.	Take a page from hockey and pull the quarterback.	Who am I, God? Good luck with that.	On first down ... punt. And done.
3 Are the Bulls better off without Ben Gordon? Why or why not?	No, but he's better off without them. He may actually get a chance to play meaningful games.	Ben there, done squat. Next.	Ben Gordon is a classic one-dimensional player. They're always expendable.	The Bulls wouldn't be better off with six clones of Ben Gordon, so I don't think it's going to matter much.	Better without. Is he getting public relations tips from Chad Johnson?
4 Brad Childress challenged the media to practice with the Vikings. What do you say?	It would have been great if a reporter actually did it and injured star Adrian Peterson.	I would use trickery on their cornerbacks: "Hey, your fly route's open."	I challenge Brad Childress to be clever in 18 words or less.	I say that you haven't lived until you've invaded Iceland, so I'm all for it.	Practice? ... We're talkin' 'bout practice!?
5 What has been the biggest disappointment of the Olympics so far?	What? You mean there will be more—even after Michael Phelps is done? Pointless.	When it comes to slowness, our track team ranks somewhere between Forrest Gump and Jimmy.	The elimination of the 400 Meter Hedley Lamar Relay.	That they haven't accepted my idea for competitive pizza eating. Ummm, ever hear of ratings? Hell-oooo?	Besides the Russian gymnastics team, where are the dogs?

The Cubs put together a big seventh inning to make Ryan Dempster a winner and secure a 5-1 road trip. Two-run doubles by Alfonso Soriano and Aramis Ramirez and a three-run double by Reed Johnson sparked an eight-run seventh and the Cubs rallied past the Florida Marlins, 9-2 on Sunday.

Quentin hit his 34th homer and drove in four runs, and the White Sox won a series in Oakland for the first time in eight years by beating the Athletics 13-1 Sunday.

Quentin, who was a standout player at Stanford, went 6-for-9 with two homers in his first three games in Oakland.

“There’s a lot of people I still care about here in the Bay Area,” Quentin said. “I love coming back to Stanford, although I didn’t have a chance to go back this trip. The Bay Area is familiar to me and I always liked the Bay Area.”

Javier Vazquez (10-10) allowed four hits in eight innings to help the White Sox win consecutive games in Oakland for the first time since August 2000. The Sox also took the season series from the A’s for the first time in eight years.

“When I get that many runs I think just throw strikes and be aggressive,” Vazquez said. “Everything was working. With that many runs, just continue to pound the strike zone.”

Alexei Ramirez’s grand slam was the Sox’s ninth of the season, two shy of the franchise record set in 2006.

The White Sox won for the fifth time in six games to remain tied with Minnesota atop the AL Central. Chicago moved a season-best 17 games over .500 at 70-53.

HR helpers

Juan Uribe hit his second home run in the last four games, an unlikely spurt given he has just five HRs for the season. But the White Sox, who lead all of baseball with 174 home runs, get power hitting wherever they can find it.

PLAYER	ON SUNDAY	TOTAL (TEAM RANK)
Juan Uribe	Two-run HR in the 2nd	5 (11)
Carlos Quentin	Two-run HR in the 3rd	34 (1)
Jermaine Dye	Solo HR in the 3rd	29 (2)
Alexei Ramirez	Grand slam in the 7th	12 (6*)

Musicians flock to Yahoo, AOL live performance series

Los Angeles Times

Musicians have learned to down-scale their expectations for TV exposure these days. Those lucky enough to score any might get a song spotlighted in a TV show or commercial. If they do a late-night talk show, it's typically one song at the end of the hour.

That's what put a kid-in-the-candy-store grin on veteran bluesman Buddy Guy's face one night a couple weeks ago when he stepped on the Fox Studios soundstage in Century City, Calif. He was there to tape a live performance for the "Nissan Live Sets on Yahoo! Music" series, one of a growing number of Internet-based forums offering musicians a more generous chunk of time in the limelight.

"I'm like a baseball player," the 72-year-old Chicago guitarist and singer said while relaxing in his dressing room after an afternoon rehearsal and sound check. "I like to get out there and play for as long as it takes. But you can't do that on most television shows. I love to walk the floor and play—this is the first time I've gotten the freedom to do a TV show that's 100 percent Buddy Guy."

Walk the floor he did—and more. His performance, to be posted on the Yahoo! Music Web site sometime in October, ran well past the hour allotted. He prowled the stage, then ventured among fans who'd snagged free tickets by replying to targeted e-mail invitations that had been sent to his most ardent supporters.

"I think we caught lightning tonight," said Neal Weiss, the show's executive producer. It was the kind of moment he always hopes for. The series has presented 44 installments. Participants have included Weezer, The Offspring, Herbie Hancock, Tony Bennett, Moby, John Legend, Incubus, Snoop Dogg, Brian Wilson, Trisha Yearwood and Santana.

The goal is to drive more Internet users to Yahoo, just as AOL attempts to do with its "Sessions(at)AOL" series. Each strives to distinguish its content from the countless videos circulating on YouTube, artists' Web sites and elsewhere.

AOL's series zeros in on musicians and their songs; Yahoo emphasizes interaction between performers and fans.

"The thing that gets me is how many surprises there are," said Scott Moore, senior vice president of media for Yahoo. "When Snoop Dogg was on, I expected a rap show. But he brought a 20-person band. It was like a big band with rap and guest singers. Herbie Hancock played fresh off his Grammy win (for album of the year), and Joni Mitchell showed up. Weezer brought a bunch of toy instruments and drums and handed them out to everyone and let the whole audience sing and play along."

Another element of the Yahoo series is a question-and-answer segment. Questions are vetted by the show's producers, but the results can be wildly unpredictable.

When Guy was asked to cite the best solo he'd ever played, he turned the question back on the fan: "What's the best love affair you ever had?"

NOTICE OF FORFEITURE

On April 21, 2008, the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, in a case entitled United States v. Michael A. Garcia, No. 06 CR 288, ordered forfeiture to the United States of all funds contained in Fifth Third Bank Account Number XXXXXX474 pursuant to the provisions of 18 U.S.C. § 981(a)(1)(C) and 28 U.S.C. § 2461(c).

Notice from the Superior Court of California, Alameda County Department 22, 1221 Oak Street, Oakland, CA 94612

Para ver este aviso en español, visita www.VerizonETFsettlement.com

IF YOU WERE PARTY TO A CONTRACT WITH A VERIZON WIRELESS ETF, A CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT COULD AFFECT YOUR RIGHTS

A proposed settlement has been reached in class action lawsuits alleging that Verizon Wireless's flat early termination fee ("ETF") (generally $175) is illegal. The settlement will provide $21 million into a Common Fund for claims of subscribers who were charged, paid, and/or were subject to a flat ETF. If you qualify, you may send in a claim form to get benefits, or you can exclude yourself from the settlement, or you can object to it. The Superior Court of the County of Alameda authorized this notice. The Court will have a hearing on October 21, 2008 to decide whether to approve the settlement. Any request to be excluded from the settlement must be received by September 30, 2008, and any objections to the settlement must be received by October 7, 2008.

WHO'S INCLUDED?

If you had a contract for personal cell phone service with Verizon Wireless that included a flat ETF, you may be a member of the classes whose rights are affected by this settlement. If you're not sure you are included, you can get more information, including a detailed notice, at www.VerizonETFsettlement.com.

WHAT'S THIS ABOUT?

The lawsuits claim that the Verizon Wireless flat ETF is illegal. Verizon Wireless denies that it did anything wrong. The Court has not decided which side was right, but both sides agreed to the settlement to resolve the case.

WHAT DOES THE SETTLEMENT PROVIDE?

Verizon Wireless has agreed to pay $21 million into a Common Fund to be allocated among class members. Attorneys' fees, costs of the litigation, settlement administration fees, and incentive awards to class representatives will be taken out of the Common Fund prior to distribution. The settlement does not relieve class members of any existing or future obligations to pay ETFs they owe to Verizon Wireless.

Verizon Wireless has also agreed to not insert a flat ETF provision into its customer service agreements for wireless service in the United States for a minimum of 24 months. Verizon Wireless customer agreements initiated after November 16, 2006 have pro-rated ETFs, and the settlement does not require Verizon Wireless to modify those contracts.

The settlement will release claims that subscribers may have against Verizon Wireless relating to its ETFs, unless the individual excludes him/her self from the settlement. If, however, Verizon Wireless institutes a lawsuit or an arbitration against an individual to recover any unpaid flat ETF, you can still assert on an individual basis any defenses to such an action.

WHAT ARE MY LEGAL RIGHTS AND OPTIONS?

Submit A Claim Form	A detailed notice and claim form package contains everything you need. Just visit www.VerizonETFsettlement.com or call 1-888-309-3847 to get one. To qualify for a payment, you must send in a claim form.
Exclude Yourself	Get no payment. This is the only option that allows you to ever be part of any other lawsuit against Verizon Wireless about any issues relating to the flat ETF. You may exclude yourself from the class by submitting a written exclusion request addressed to White v. Celco Partnership dba Verizon Wireless, c/o Gilardi & Co. LLC, P.O. Box 808054, Petaluma, CA 94975-8054 by September 30, 2008. The detailed notice at the website provides more information about how to exclude yourself.
Object	Write to the Court about why you don't like the settlement. The Court will hold a hearing in this case (White v. Celco Partnership d/b/a Verizon Wireless, RG04-137699) on October 21, 2008 at 2:00 pm in Department 17, to consider whether to approve the settlement and the request by the lawyers representing Settlement Class Members for attorneys' fees and costs. Unless you request to be excluded from the class, you may appear at the hearing to object to the settlement and the application for attorneys' fees and expenses. To do so, you must file a written notice of objection, together with a statement of your reasons with the Court, at the above address with a copy to class counsel listed below, by no later than October 7, 2008.

You may obtain more information about the settlement, including the settlement agreement and the Court's orders, by visiting www.VerizonETFsettlement.com, or by contacting counsel for the class (Law Offices of Scott A. Bursor 500 Seventh Avenue, 10th Floor New York, NY 10018). Please do not contact the Court or Verizon Wireless.

Dawson's Web venture works

NBC could have a hit on its hands—thanks to Rosario Dawson's engaging personality.

Dawson, the executive producer and star of the sci-fi drama "Gemini Division," is boldly going where few Hollywood stars have gone—online.

The Web-only "Gemini Division" is set in the "not too distant future," when New York undercover police office Anna Diaz (Dawson) is drawn into a secret war between a race of artificial life forms known as SIMs and the covert agency charged with hunting them down.

In the series' first two episodes, Anna is on a romantic Paris getaway with Nick Korda (Justin Hartley), who asks her to marry him. It doesn't take long before things go wrong. Anna spots a mysterious man following the couple.

Episodes are set up as video e-mails, with Anna filling in a friend or family member—we're never sure who it is—about what's going on in Paris.

"I wanted to tell you first," she says to the camera. Actually, she's telling the Webisode's viewers. Dawson's delivery, filled with self-conscious confessionals and a little TMI, will make viewers feel like she's talking to them exclusively. I swear she's my bestie now!

WHEN TO WATCH

The 50 episodes of "Gemini Division" can be seen at nbc.com and scifi.com. An NBC rep told me Friday that the first four episodes will post Monday. Starting Aug. 25, a new episode will post every Monday through Thursday, and an extended "catch-up" episode will post on Fridays.

Her chats are intercut with shots of the events she's talking about—her and Nick at Notre Dame, where she first spots the man watching them, for example. Both episodes I watched end with mini-cliffhangers that are meant to bring viewers back.

They worked. I'm definitely ready for the third episode.

WHAT HE SAID

"I jumped at the chance to work with her. She's really great. She's intense when she works, really good at her job but just a total card comedian at the same time. [She's a] really great person to be around."

—JUSTIN HARTLEY, talking to me at San Diego Comic-Con about co-star Rosario Dawson

Keep it Cuil

The Washington Post

Founded by Google alum Anna Patterson, the new search engine Cuil (pronounced "cool") promised to be more comprehensive and relevant than the big G—and with a sharp magazine layout. But a week into the launch of cuil.com, there are a few gripes: How much energy should reasonably be put into understanding a search engine's name? (Cuil is Gaelic for "knowledge," says the company ... though we get "fly, flea or gnat" with our online Gaelic dictionary.) And another thing: Cuil's "Explore by Category" is supposed to yield a deeper, richer search ... but it upturned some totally bizarre results.

Bardem keeps mum on personal life

The Kansas City Star

Javier Bardem remembers the time from his childhood when he realized he was a performer.

"I was playing make-believe like any other kid," the 39-year-old actor recalled in a phone conversation from his Madrid home. "And there was a moment when something clicked inside that made me aware of myself, that allowed me to watch myself playing from the outside. Up to then play had been unconscious.

"The difference between an actor and anyone else is that awareness of the playing."

He has been playing ever since, and he's pretty good at it. He has the Oscar to prove it. Bardem roared into the mainstream and off with a supporting actor award as the killer Anton Chigurh in last year's Coen brothers hit "No Country for Old Men."

Now, in Woody Allen's new comedy "Vicky Cristina Barcelona," Bardem plays the sort of role you'd think would be most obvious for him. In the comedy he's Jose Antonio, a Latin lover and sensuous painter who flits among three women: a couple of Americans visiting Barcelona (Scarlett Johansson and Rebecca Hall) and his mercurial ex-wife

Javier Bardem and Scarlett Johansson star in "Vicky Cristina Barcelona." THE WEINSTEIN CO.

(Penelope Cruz).

Bardem and Cruz, who had been friends ever since they co-starred in "Jamon, Jamon," began to date during filming. That at least is the story being told by the Spanish media. One source even quoted Bardem as saying that he was going to propose to Cruz on a vacation planned for this month.

Bardem isn't commenting. Before this interview a publicist for the Weinstein company, distributor of the movie, said Bardem wouldn't answer questions about his personal life.

He will talk about his Oscar, however, saying the biggest fallout was not how he viewed himself but how he was viewed by others.

"You discover that some people around you have changed. Some people place too much importance on it," he said. "Five months later things are back to normal. But the first two months were crazy and not always crazy good."

BARDEM'S MANY FACES

Javier Bardem has been a human chameleon almost unrecognizable from one role to the next. Some highlights:

Before Night Falls (2000)

Bardem lost 30 pounds to play real-life gay Cuban writer Reinaldo Arenas, who fled political and sexual persecution only to die of AIDS in the U.S.

Mondays in the Sun (2002)

In this Spanish drama about workers displaced by the closing of a shipyard, Bardem transforms himself into a great bear of a man ... hulking, bearded, powerful.

The Sea Inside (2004)

In this right-to-die drama, Bardem plays paralyzed real-life sailor Ramon Sampedro.

No Country for Old Men (2007)

Bardem was chilling beneath an absurd Beatles 'do as a seemingly superhuman killing machine.

AUG. 18-24

JENNIFER SHEPHERD

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

If you can't get your act together this week, you never will. Four planets in your sign are conspiring to bring you loads of luck. Call up that hot stranger whose number you collected months ago. Improbable and impossible dreams might come true now.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You've been doubting yourself a bit lately, but Mars will soon change that. Your confidence will be through the stratosphere. Gold medalist Michael Phelps will have nothing on you. You'll find it easy to seduce, impress, and amaze.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 21

Helpful Venus is bringing a spirit of healing to your relationship. Even if you've been cranky and awful lately, your honey will forgive you. If you're single, people will see you as charmingly eccentric instead of opinionated and bitchy.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Remember the one who got away? If you still have feelings for an ex-spouse, former roommate or high school sweetheart, those emotions could be activated again this week. The sun says explore a little further. You never know what might happen.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Bouncy Jupiter is waving his magic wand and bringing you happy vibes. You'll have an amazing weekend with your honey, discovering new levels of compatibility. Or if you're single, you'll learn that at least three people are in love with you.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Sometimes you don't trust yourself enough. Listen to your intuition this week and then remember to act on it. Mars is reminding you that you're very psychic and you need to trust this ability a lot more. Follow your instincts when it comes to handling that special someone.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

With four planets opposite your sign, you could have a cosmic headache. You're wondering if everything you've ever believed was a lie and if everyone you've ever loved was evil. Don't let paranoia spoil a promising seduction scenario.

Aries

March 21-April 19

When it comes to romance, usually you love to take the initiative. But as Mars moves opposite your sign, you'll want to be chased instead of having to do all the chasing. It could be time to invest in a new wardrobe, hairstyle or hot look to attract flirty friends.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

You can intimidate your partners with your ability to analyze their behavior. But Mercury is inspiring you to help your honey instead of picking him or her apart. Provide encouragement. Tell him that he's a manly man or let her know how girly and sexy she is.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

You'll feel clearer about making a decision, thanks to assertive Mars. If you've been trying to choose between two partners, you'll know exactly what needs to be done. And if you've been wondering if you should get back together with someone, you'll finally figure it out.

Cancer

June 22-July 22

Kinky Uranus is turning you into a sexual adventurer. You'll want to try anything and everything with your honey. Instead of playing it shy like you usually do, you'll want to be on top. Your partner could really fall for this fearless new you.

Love (dis)connections

Mayer, Aniston reportedly call it quits

Looks like the rumors are true: John Mayer and Jennifer Aniston are no more. “I ended a relationship to be alone, because I don’t want to waste somebody’s time if something’s not right,” Mayer told reporters Saturday in New York, according to People Magazine. “People are different, people have different chemistry,” the crooner said of his relationship with Aniston, which reportedly began back in April and, according to unnamed sources, recently came to a close. It seems that there’s no love completely lost between the two, however. Mayer said “Jennifer Aniston is the smartest, most sophisticated person I think I have ever met.” Here’s a look back at a relationship that became one of the juiciest scoops of the last few months—along with a bit of the RedEye play-by-play.

THE BEGINNINGS

TIME: April

THE EVENT: Jennifer Aniston and John Mayer have a private lunch in a Miami restaurant.

KNEE-JERK REACTION: They’re totally dating!

IN HINDSIGHT: They were totally dating!

THE PDA PUBLICITY

TIME: April-May

THE EVENT: Photos surface of Aniston and Mayer on the beach; in May, they hit a Miami hot spot together.

KNEE-JERK REACTION: Is Mayer up to his old tricks with those high-profile girlfriends?

IN HINDSIGHT: Yeah, probably.

THE MAKING OF AN ENTOURAGE?

TIME: June

THE EVENT: Aniston and Mayer dine with Courteney Cox in L.A.

KNEE-JERK REACTION: She’s introducing him to her “Friends” friends. Must be serious.

IN HINDSIGHT: They seemed to be taking it slow after meeting and dating so quickly in Miami.

ON THE ROAD AGAIN

TIME: June-July

THE EVENT: Aniston starts tagging along on Mayer’s summer concert tour.

KNEE-JERK REACTION: Doesn’t she have other stuff to do?

IN HINDSIGHT: Maybe they were spending too much time together.

THE AWKWARD COMMENTS

TIME: July

THE EVENTS: On tour, Mayer makes comments about his sleeping arrangements and admits to hooking up with a fan in the past.

KNEE-JERK REACTION: Jen is not going to like this.

IN HINDSIGHT: Is this when things started going South?

THE HOT TUB

TIME: August

THE EVENTS: Mayer was photographed with a woman in a hot tub in Cabo San Lucas, Mexico, but Us Weekly reported that she wasn’t a love interest.

KNEE-JERK REACTION: OK, so where’s Jen, then?

IN HINDSIGHT: Even if it wasn’t a steamy hookup in the hot tub, was Mayer losing interest in Aniston and hanging out with other people?

THE BREAKUP

TIME: August

THE EVENTS: Mayer says he doesn’t want to waste her time.

KNEE-JERK REACTION: So it’s over then, right?

'That kid from Chicago'

As Cedric the Entertainer scanned the crowd of more than 6,000 gathered on Chicago's South Side to remember Bernie Mac on Saturday, he cracked that the comedy king was "still the hottest ticket in town."

Samuel L. Jackson, who co-stars with Mac in the upcoming movie "Soul Men," spoke at the House of Hope megachurch, The Associated Press reports.

Jackson observed that Mac didn't mind the loss of privacy that comes with fame.

"He never turned that kid down for an autograph," Jackson said. "He always had time to shake a hand. He was always that kid from Chicago who wanted to make everybody happy and everybody laugh."

Samuel L. Jackson arrives at Bernie Mac's memorial service on Saturday. AP

McAdams' lip-locking fears

Rachel McAdams had a steamy love scene with ex Ryan Gosling in "The Notebook" back in the day, but she still says kissing is odd. "They're strange. A kiss with anyone, on or off camera, can be intimidating," she tells T, the magazine of The New York Times. "I've been kissing for nearly two decades now, and I'm always convinced I'm not doing it right."

Lohan to Phelps: Let's meet

Even Lindsay Lohan has Michael Phelps fever. "Tell him he's [bleeping] amazing, and I want to meet him," LiLo tells "Access Hollywood" reporter Billy Bush in an upcoming interview. Phelps had told the celeb show in 2004 that Lohan was the star he'd most like to meet because, "she's pretty hot," according to accesshollywood.com.

AWESOME/AWK-WARD

AWESOME:

↑ Madonna hits the half-century mark. Or, as they say in the biz, it's 50 and fabulous!

AWK-WARD: Matthew McConaughey photographed with shirt on. On a surf board. So is he also gonna wear shirts, like, in the grocery store?

AWESOME:

↑ Murray, lord of the parachute. Almost made that Air & Water show worth all the traffic—and racket

AWESOME: Britney Spears-VMA's speculation. Whatever she does, it won't be forgettable.

AWK-WARD:

↓ Late chef Julia Child's secret spy past. Why she didn't have a spy-themed cooking show is anyone's guess.

Michael Phelps made his mark in more ways than one over the weekend.

NBC's broadcast of the Olympics was the most viewed Saturday night program on the network since 1990, according to a news release from the network. On the night when Phelps won his unmatched eighth gold medal of the 2008 Summer Games and his historic 14th career Olympic gold medal, NBC charted a peak audience of nearly 40 million during the men's 4x100 medley relay.

Talk about making a splash.

Wedding belles

It's official: Ellen DeGeneres and Portia de Rossi are hitched.

The couple wed Saturday "in an intimate ceremony at their home in Los Angeles," their rep tells people.com.

DeGeneres, 50, and de Rossi, 35, exchanged rings, the mag reports. Nineteen guests including the couple's mothers attended the event and witnessed the two exchange handwritten vows, according to People.

After the California Supreme Court's ruling legalizing same-sex marriage in May, The Associated Press reports, the talk-show host announced that she and de Rossi would wed after four years together.

My name is Jonas

What do you get an international music celebrity for his 19th birthday?

If you're Joe Jonas' family, you get him a motorcycle with a sidecar.

"I'm pumped!"

Jonas, one of the three rockers of tween heartthrob band the Jonas Brothers, said in an interview Friday on Radio Disney, according to people.com excerpts.

"Don't worry," chimed in brother Kevin Jonas, 20, "There were lots of helmets given."

To top it all off, the birthday Jonas reportedly had strawberry shortcake to celebrate his big day.

Keeping up with Reggie, Kim

Has Kim Kardashian found The One in footballer Reggie Bush?

"I hope so," Kardashian tells people.com. "I think I finally made the right choice. He's just a really sweet, normal guy."

The "Keeping Up With the Kardashians" star says she wants to spend more time with her New Orleans Saint and that "we'll talk about it" when it comes to marriage.

"As soon as we're done filming ['Keeping Up with the Kardashians'] I'm probably going to spend most of my time in New Orleans for a little bit," she says.

Enough already!

Bob Saget is so done talking about the Olsen twins.

"It gets old," the former "Full House" star, whose Comedy Central Roast was set to air Sunday, tells The Associated Press. "It can get a little bit exhausting. It's really not about anything. It kind of makes me really just want to go and read the news ... and then go to a movie. Or do some cardio."

Somewhere, Mary-Kate and Ashley must be flattered.
